RE: Letter of agreement to serve on Fish Passage Policy Advisory Committee

Dear Puget Sound Partnership Proposal Review Panel Members:

I agree to serve on the Fish Passage Policy Advisory Committee (FPPAC) for the proposed Puget Sound Partnership project entitled: "Maximizing returns on investing in barrier culvert removal in Washington state".

I am currently the Assistant Director of Natural Resources for the Squaxin Island Tribe. In my position I have been involved for literally decades in addressing blockages to anadromous fish migration, including the sub-proceeding in US v Washington which resulted in an injunction requiring the repair and replacement of state-owned barrier culverts.

Thousands of fish passage barriers, primarily outdated culverts at road crossings, limit access to hundreds of miles of riparian salmon habitat throughout Washington. State agencies, local governments, and private landowners have accelerated the removal of these barriers in order to encourage the recovery of declining wild salmon stocks protected by legislation and tribal treaty rights. This project will provide tools to evaluate alternative barrier correction strategies that account for the diverse priorities of agencies and stakeholder groups. Such a tool will allow stakeholders and funding agencies communicate their priorities and evaluate tradeoffs using a consistent, science-based framework. To be effective this project requires close coordination with envisioned users of the proposed tool: grant managers, state and local policymakers, and tribal stakeholders.

As a member of the FPPAC I will provide practical expertise and knowledge of barrier correction projects and prioritization policy. I will provide advice on the analysis and models that will be developed by the research team to evaluate correction strategies and will help disseminate research findings from this project to facilitate uptake of the resulting decision support tool among policymakers and stakeholders. I understand that the FPPAC is expected to meet for biannual project-update meetings and promote two stakeholder outreach workshops.

The Squaxin Island Tribe recognizes the importance of a coordinated strategy across multiple ownerships to correct barriers to fish migration. The fish do not recognize jurisdiction or ownership. They simply must have access to their full range of habitat to survive.

Sincerely,

Jeff Dickison
